KEYWORDS  Atrial fibrillation, heart disease, category 3 aviation medical certificate  FILE NO.  P-2040-01  SECTOR (Marine or Aviation)  SPECIFIC JOB  DIAGNOSIS (Primary, Secondary, etc.)  REVIEW  DATE OF DETERMINATION  MEMBER  David S. Ahmed  DETERMINATION  The decision of the Minister of Transport to suspend the applicant's category 3 medical certificate is confirmed.  REASONS FOR THE  Suspension of a category 3 medical certificate — Atrial	GENERAL INFORMATION medical certificate P-2040-01 SECTOR (Marine or Aviation) SPECIFIC JOB DIAGNOSIS (Primary, Secondary, etc.)  REVIEW DATE OF DETERMINATION MEMBER DETERMINATION MEMBER DETERMINATION The decision of the Minister of Transport to suspend the applicant's category 3 medical certificate is confirmed.  REASONS FOR THE Suspension of a category 3 medical certificate — Atrial fibrillation is a condition in which the heart beats in an irregularly fashion and anyone with this condition is prone to forming blood clots in the heart. In most cases, patients suffering from atrial fibrillation are put onto anticoagulant therapy (blood thinners) which helps to decrease the incidence of intracardiac thrombosis.  However, the applicant is not taking anticoagulant therapy which would certainly appear to put him at an even greater risk of developing complications. Based on the evidence, the Tribunal member has determined that the Minister of Transport acted correctly in suspending the applicant's category 3 medical certificate.  APPEAL  DATE OF DECISION February 5, 2001  DECISION The appeal is dismissed. The Minister of Transport's decision is upheld.  REASONS FOR THE DECISION The appeal is dismissed. The Tribunal member at review concluded that, based on the medical evidence presented, the appellant had a medical condition called atrial fibrillation. This results in an irregular heartbeat, causing the risk of blood clots being sent to other parts of the body, a condition which could result in death or incapacitation. The appeal annel accepts and agrees with the review member's finding that the appellant is unfit to exercise the privileges of a category 3 medical ererificate.
FILE NO.  SECTOR (Marine or Aviation)  SPECIFIC JOB  DIAGNOSIS (Primary, Secondary, etc.)  REVIEW  DATE OF DETERMINATION  MEMBER  DETERMINATION  August 28, 2000  MEMBER  DETERMINATION  The decision of the Minister of Transport to suspend the applicant's category 3 medical certificate is confirmed.  Suspension of a category 3 medical certificate — Atrial fibrillation is a condition in which the heart beats in an irregularly fashion and anyone with this condition is prone to forming blood clots in the heart. In most cases, patients suffering from atrial fibrillation are put onto anticoagulant therapy (blood thinners) which helps to decrease the incidence of intracardiac thrombosis. However, the applicant is not taking anticoagulant therapy which would certainly appear to put him at an even greater risk of developing complications. Based on the evidence, the Tribunal member has determined that the Minister of Transport acted correctly in suspending the applicant's category 3 medical certificate.  APPEAL  DATE OF DECISION  MEMBERS  DECISION  The appeal is dismissed. The Minister of Transport's decision is upheld.  REASONS FOR THE DECISION  The appeal is dismissed. The Tribunal member at review concluded that, based on the medical evidence presented, the appellant had a medical condition called atrial fibrillation. This results in an irregular heartbeat, causing the risk of blood clots being sent to other parts of the body, a condition which could result in death or incapacitation. The appeal panel accepts and agrees with the review member's finding that the appellant is unfit to exercise the privileges of a category 3 medical certificate.	KET WORDS
SECTOR (Marine or Aviation) SPECIFIC JOB Private pilot Atrial fibrillation etc.)  REVIEW  DATE OF DETERMINATION MEMBER DETERMINATION REASONS FOR THE DETERMINATION  REASONS FOR THE DETERMINATION  REASONS FOR THE DETERMINATION  REASONS FOR THE DETERMINATION  REASONS FOR THE DETERMINATION  REASONS FOR THE DETERMINATION  REASONS FOR THE DETERMINATION  REASONS FOR THE DETERMINATION  REASONS FOR THE DETERMINATION  Suspension of a category 3 medical certificate — Atrial fibrillation is a condition in which the heart beats in an irregularly fashion and anyone with this condition is prone to forming blood clots in the heart. In most cases, patients suffering from atrial fibrillation are put onto anticoagulant therapy (blood thinners) which helps to decrease the incidence of intracardiac thrombosis. However, the applicant is not taking anticoagulant therapy which would certainly appear to put him at an even greater risk of developing complications. Based on the evidence, the Tribunal member has determined that the Minister of Transport acted correctly in suspending the applicant's category 3 medical certificate.  APPEAL  DATE OF DECISION  MEMBERS  Dr. Samuel Birenbaum, William T. Tweed, Keith E. Green  DECISION  The appeal is dismissed. The Minister of Transport's decision is upheld.  REASONS FOR THE DECISION  The appeal is dismissed. The Tribunal member at review concluded that, based on the medical evidence presented, the appellant had a medical condition called atrial fibrillation. This results in an irregular heartbeat, causing the risk of blood clots being sent to other parts of the body, a condition which could result in death or incapacitation. The appeal panel accepts and agrees with the review member's finding that the appellant is unfit to exercise the privileges of a category 3 medical certificate.	FILE NO.
Private pilot DIAGNOSIS (Primary, Secondary, etc.)  REVIEW DATE OF DETERMINATION MEMBER DETERMINATION  REASONS FOR THE DETERMINATION  EXEMPLIAN SUSPENSION  DETERMINATION  BEASONS FOR THE DETERMINATION  Comparison of a category 3 medical certificate — Atrial fibrillation is a condition in which the heart beats in an irregularly fashion and anyone with this condition is prone to forming blood clots in the heart. In most cases, patients suffering from atrial fibrillation are put onto anticoagulant therapy (blood thinners) which helps to decrease the incidence of intracardiac thrombosis. However, the applicant is not taking anticoagulant therapy which would certainly appear to put him at an even greater risk of developing complications. Based on the evidence, the Tribunal member has determined that the Minister of Transport acted correctly in suspending the applicant's category 3 medical certificate.  APPEAL  DATE OF DECISION  February 5, 2001  Dr. Samuel Birenbaum, William T. Tweed, Keith E. Green  DECISION  The appeal is dismissed. The Minister of Transport's decision is upheld.  REASONS FOR THE DECISION  The appeal is dismissed. The Tribunal member at review concluded that, based on the medical evidence presented, the appellant had a medical condition called atrial fibrillation. This results in an irregular heartheat, causing the risk of blood clots being sent to other parts of the body, a condition which could result in death or incapacitation. The appeal panel accepts and agrees with the review member's finding that the appellant is unfit to exercise the privileges of a category 3 medical certificate.
DIAGNOSIS (Primary, Secondary, etc.)  REVIEW  DATE OF DETERMINATION  MEMBER  David S. Ahmed  DETERMINATION  REASONS FOR THE  DETERMINATION  BEASONS FOR THE  DETERMINATION  DETERMINATION  Comparison of a category 3 medical certificate — Atrial fibrillation is a condition in which the heart beats in an irregularly fashion and anyone with this condition is prone to forming blood clots in the heart. In most cases, patients suffering from atrial fibrillation are put onto anticoagulant therapy (blood thinners) which helps to decrease the incidence of intracardiac thrombosis. However, the applicant is not taking anticoagulant therapy which would certainly appear to put him at an even greater risk of developing complications. Based on the evidence, the Tribunal member has determined that the Minister of Transport acted correctly in suspending the applicant's category 3 medical certificate.  APPEAL  DATE OF DECISION  February 5, 2001  Dr. Samuel Birenbaum, William T. Tweed, Keith E. Green  DECISION  The appeal is dismissed. The Minister of Transport's decision is upheld.  REASONS FOR THE DECISION  The appeal is dismissed. The Tribunal member at review concluded that, based on the medical evidence presented, the appellant had a medical condition called atrial fibrillation. This results in an irregular heartbeat, causing the risk of blood clots being sent to other parts of the body, a condition which could result in death or incapacitation. The appeal panel accepts and agrees with the review member's finding that the appellant is unfit to exercise the privileges of a category 3 medical certificate.		1 11 1 1
REVIEW  DATE OF DETERMINATION  MEMBER  David S. Ahmed  DETERMINATION  REASONS FOR THE  DETERMINATION  REASONS FOR THE  DETERMINATION  REASONS FOR THE  DETERMINATION  The decision of the Minister of Transport to suspend the applicant's category 3 medical certificate is confirmed.  Suspension of a category 3 medical certificate — Atrial fibrillation is a condition in which the heart beats in an irregularly fashion and anyone with this condition is prone to forming blood clots in the heart. In most cases, patients suffering from atrial fibrillation are put onto anticoagulant therapy (blood thinners) which helps to decrease the incidence of intracardiac thrombosis.  However, the applicant is not taking anticoagulant therapy which would certainly appear to put him at an even greater risk of developing complications. Based on the evidence, the Tribunal member has determined that the Minister of Transport acted correctly in suspending the applicant's category 3 medical certificate.  APPEAL  DATE OF DECISION  February 5, 2001  MEMBERS  Dr. Samuel Birenbaum, William T. Tweed, Keith E. Green  DECISION  The appeal is dismissed. The Minister of Transport's decision is upheld.  The appeal is dismissed. The Tribunal member at review concluded that, based on the medical evidence presented, the appellant had a medical condition called atrial fibrillation. This results in an irregular heartbeat, causing the risk of blood clots being sent to other parts of the body, a condition which could result in death or incapacitation. The appeal panel accepts and agrees with the review member's finding that the appellant is unfit to exercise the privileges of a category 3 medical certificate.
REVIEW DATE OF DETERMINATION  MEMBER David S. Ahmed DETERMINATION The decision of the Minister of Transport to suspend the applicant's category 3 medical certificate is confirmed.  REASONS FOR THE DETERMINATION Suspension of a category 3 medical certificate — Atrial fibrillation is a condition in which the heart beats in an irregularly fashion and anyone with this condition is prone to forming blood clots in the heart. In most cases, patients suffering from atrial fibrillation are put onto anticoagulant therapy (blood thinners) which helps to decrease the incidence of intracardiac thrombosis. However, the applicant is not taking anticoagulant therapy which would certainly appear to put him at an even greater risk of developing complications. Based on the evidence, the Tribunal member has determined that the Minister of Transport acted correctly in suspending the applicant's category 3 medical certificate.  APPEAL  DATE OF DECISION February 5, 2001 Dr. Samuel Birenbaum, William T. Tweed, Keith E. Green  DECISION The appeal is dismissed. The Minister of Transport's decision is upheld.  REASONS FOR THE DECISION The appeal is dismissed. The Tribunal member at review concluded that, based on the medical evidence presented, the appellant had a medical condition called atrial fibrillation. This results in an irregular heartbeat, causing the risk of blood clots being sent to other parts of the body, a condition which could result in death or incapacitation. The appeal panel accepts and agrees with the review member's finding that the appellant is unfit to exercise the privileges of a category 3 medical certificate.	` ",	Attial libiliation
DATE OF DETERMINATION  MEMBER  David S. Ahmed  The decision of the Minister of Transport to suspend the applicant's category 3 medical certificate is confirmed.  Suspension of a category 3 medical certificate — Atrial fibrillation is a condition in which the heart beats in an irregularly fashion and anyone with this condition is prone to forming blood clots in the heart. In most cases, patients suffering from atrial fibrillation are put onto anticoagulant therapy (blood thinners) which helps to decrease the incidence of intracardiac thrombosis. However, the applicant is not taking anticoagulant therapy which would certainly appear to put him at an even greater risk of developing complications. Based on the evidence, the Tribunal member has determined that the Minister of Transport acted correctly in suspending the applicant's category 3 medical certificate.  APPEAL  DATE OF DECISION  February 5, 2001  Dr. Samuel Birenbaum, William T. Tweed, Keith E. Green  DECISION  The appeal is dismissed. The Minister of Transport's decision is upheld.  REASONS FOR THE DECISION  The appeal is dismissed. The Tribunal member at review concluded that, based on the medical evidence presented, the appellant had a medical condition called atrial fibrillation. This results in an irregular heartbeat, causing the risk of blood clots being sent to other parts of the body, a condition which could result in death or incapacitation. The appeal panel accepts and agrees with the review member's finding that the appellant is unfit to exercise the privileges of a category 3 medical certificate.	, , , , , , , , , , , , , , , , , , ,
MEMBER DETERMINATION The decision of the Minister of Transport to suspend the applicant's category 3 medical certificate is confirmed.  REASONS FOR THE DETERMINATION Suspension of a category 3 medical certificate — Atrial fibrillation is a condition in which the heart beats in an irregularly fashion and anyone with this condition is prone to forming blood clots in the heart. In most cases, patients suffering from atrial fibrillation are put onto anticoagulant therapy (blood thinners) which helps to decrease the incidence of intracardiac thrombosis. However, the applicant is not taking anticoagulant therapy which would certainly appear to put him at an even greater risk of developing complications. Based on the evidence, the Tribunal member has determined that the Minister of Transport acted correctly in suspending the applicant's category 3 medical certificate.  APPEAL  DATE OF DECISION February 5, 2001  Dr. Samuel Birenbaum, William T. Tweed, Keith E. Green  DECISION The appeal is dismissed. The Minister of Transport's decision is upheld.  REASONS FOR THE DECISION The appeal is dismissed. The Tribunal member at review concluded that, based on the medical evidence presented, the appellant had a medical condition called atrial fibrillation. This results in an irregular heartbeat, causing the risk of blood clots being sent to other parts of the body, a condition which could result in death or incapacitation. The appeal panel accepts and agrees with the review member's finding that the appellant is unfit to exercise the privileges of a category 3 medical certificate.	DATE OF DETERMINATION	August 28, 2000
DETERMINATION  The decision of the Minister of Transport to suspend the applicant's category 3 medical certificate is confirmed.  Suspension of a category 3 medical certificate — Atrial fibrillation is a condition in which the heart beats in an irregularly fashion and anyone with this condition is prone to forming blood clots in the heart. In most cases, patients suffering from atrial fibrillation are put onto anticoagulant therapy (blood thinners) which helps to decrease the incidence of intracardiac thrombosis. However, the applicant is not taking anticoagulant therapy which would certainly appear to put him at an even greater risk of developing complications. Based on the evidence, the Tribunal member has determined that the Minister of Transport acted correctly in suspending the applicant's category 3 medical certificate.  APPEAL  DATE OF DECISION  February 5, 2001  DECISION  February 5, 2001  Dr. Samuel Birenbaum, William T. Tweed, Keith E. Green  DECISION  The appeal is dismissed. The Minister of Transport's decision is upheld.  REASONS FOR THE DECISION  The appeal is dismissed on the medical evidence presented, the appellant had a medical condition called atrial fibrillation. This results in an irregular heartbeat, causing the risk of blood clots being sent to other parts of the body, a condition which could result in death or incapacitation. The appeal panel accepts and agrees with the review member's finding that the appellant is unfit to exercise the privileges of a category 3 medical certificate.	MEMBER applicant's category 3 medical certificate is confirmed.  REASONS FOR THE  Suspension of a category 3 medical certificate — Atrial fibrillation is a condition in which the heart beats in an irregularly fashion and anyone with this condition is prone to forming blood clots in the heart. In most cases, patients suffering from atrial fibrillation are put onto anticoagulant therapy (blood thinners) which helps to decrease the incidence of intracardiac thrombosis. However, the applicant is not taking anticoagulant therapy which would certainly appear to put him at an even greater risk of developing complications. Based on the evidence, the Tribunal member has determined that the Minister of Transport acted correctly in suspending the applicant's category 3 medical certificate.  APPEAL  DATE OF DECISION  February 5, 2001  MEMBERS  Dr. Samuel Birenbaum, William T. Tweed, Keith E. Green  DECISION  The appeal is dismissed. The Minister of Transport's decision is upheld.  REASONS FOR THE DECISION  The appeal is dismissed. The Tribunal member at review concluded that, based on the medical evidence presented, the appellant had a medical condition called atrial fibrillation. This results in an irregular heartbeat, causing the risk of blood clots being sent to other parts of the body, a condition which could result in death or incapacitation. The appeal panel accepts and agrees with the review member's finding that the appellant is unfit to exercise the privileges of a category 3 medical certificate.	DETERMINATION REASONS FOR THE DETERMINATION  Suspension of a category 3 medical certificate — Atrial fibrillation is a condition in which the heart beats in an irregularly fashion and anyone with this condition is prone to forming blood clots in the heart. In most cases, patients suffering from atrial fibrillation are put onto anticoagulant therapy (blood thinners) which helps to decrease the incidence of intracardiac thrombosis. However, the applicant is not taking anticoagulant therapy which would certainly appear to put him at an even greater risk of developing complications. Based on the evidence, the Tribunal member has determined that the Minister of Transport acted correctly in suspending the applicant's category 3 medical certificate.  APPEAL  DATE OF DECISION February 5, 2001 Dr. Samuel Birenbaum, William T. Tweed, Keith E. Green  DECISION The appeal is dismissed. The Minister of Transport's decision is upheld.  REASONS FOR THE DECISION The appeal is dismissed. The Tribunal member at review concluded that, based on the medical evidence presented, the appellant had a medical condition called atrial fibrillation. This results in an irregular heartbeat, causing the risk of blood clots being sent to other parts of the body, a condition which could result in death or incapacitation. The appeal panel accepts and agrees with the review member's finding that the appellant is unfit to exercise the privileges of a category 3 medical certificate. fibrillation is a condition in which the heart beats in an irregularly fashion and anyone with this condition is prone to forming blood clots in the heart. In most cases, patients suffering from atrial fibrillation are put onto anticoagulant therapy (blood thinners) which helps to decrease the incidence of intracardiac thrombosis.  However, the applicant is not taking anticoagulant therapy which would certainly appear to put him at an even greater risk of developing complications. Based on the evidence, the Tribunal member has determined that the Minister of Transport acted correctly in suspending the applicant's category 3 medical certificate.  APPEAL  DATE OF DECISION  February 5, 2001  DECISION  February 5, 2001  DECISION  The appeal is dismissed. The Minister of Transport's decision is upheld.  REASONS FOR THE DECISION  The appeal is dismissed. The Tribunal member at review concluded that, based on the medical evidence presented, the appellant had a medical condition called atrial fibrillation. This results in an irregular heartbeat, causing the risk of blood clots being sent to other parts of the body, a condition which could result in death or incapacitation. The appeal panel accepts and agrees with the review member's finding that the appellant is unfit to exercise the privileges of a category 3 medical certificate.	REASONS FOR THE
prone to forming blood clots in the heart. In most cases, patients suffering from atrial fibrillation are put onto anticoagulant therapy (blood thinners) which helps to decrease the incidence of intracardiac thrombosis. However, the applicant is not taking anticoagulant therapy which would certainly appear to put him at an even greater risk of developing complications. Based on the evidence, the Tribunal member has determined that the Minister of Transport acted correctly in suspending the applicant's category 3 medical certificate.  APPEAL  DATE OF DECISION  February 5, 2001  MEMBERS  Dr. Samuel Birenbaum, William T. Tweed, Keith E. Green  DECISION  The appeal is dismissed. The Minister of Transport's decision is upheld.  REASONS FOR THE DECISION  The appeal is dismissed. The Tribunal member at review concluded that, based on the medical evidence presented, the appellant had a medical condition called atrial fibrillation. This results in an irregular heartbeat, causing the risk of blood clots being sent to other parts of the body, a condition which could result in death or incapacitation. The appeal panel accepts and agrees with the review member's finding that the appellant is unfit to exercise the privileges of a category 3 medical certificate.	DETERMINATION
prone to forming blood clots in the heart. In most cases, patients suffering from atrial fibrillation are put onto anticoagulant therapy (blood thinners) which helps to decrease the incidence of intracardiac thrombosis. However, the applicant is not taking anticoagulant therapy which would certainly appear to put him at an even greater risk of developing complications. Based on the evidence, the Tribunal member has determined that the Minister of Transport acted correctly in suspending the applicant's category 3 medical certificate.  APPEAL  DATE OF DECISION  February 5, 2001  MEMBERS  Dr. Samuel Birenbaum, William T. Tweed, Keith E. Green  DECISION  The appeal is dismissed. The Minister of Transport's decision is upheld.  REASONS FOR THE DECISION  The appeal is dismissed. The Tribunal member at review concluded that, based on the medical evidence presented, the appellant had a medical condition called atrial fibrillation. This results in an irregular heartbeat, causing the risk of blood clots being sent to other parts of the body, a condition which could result in death or incapacitation. The appeal panel accepts and agrees with the review member's finding that the appellant is unfit to exercise the privileges of a category 3 medical certificate.		irregularly fashion and anyone with this condition is anticoagulant therapy (blood thinners) which helps to decrease the incidence of intracardiac thrombosis. However, the applicant is not taking anticoagulant therapy which would certainly appear to put him at an even greater risk of developing complications. Based on the evidence, the Tribunal member has determined that the Minister of Transport acted correctly in suspending the applicant's category 3 medical certificate.  APPEAL  DATE OF DECISION  February 5, 2001  MEMBERS  Dr. Samuel Birenbaum, William T. Tweed, Keith E. Green  DECISION  The appeal is dismissed. The Minister of Transport's decision is upheld.  REASONS FOR THE DECISION  The appeal is dismissed. The Tribunal member at review concluded that, based on the medical evidence presented, the appellant had a medical condition called atrial fibrillation. This results in an irregular heartbeat, causing the risk of blood clots being sent to other parts of the body, a condition which could result in death or incapacitation. The appeal panel accepts and agrees with the review member's finding that the appellant is unfit to exercise the privileges of a category 3 medical certificate.
decrease the incidence of intracardiac thrombosis. However, the applicant is not taking anticoagulant therapy which would certainly appear to put him at an even greater risk of developing complications. Based on the evidence, the Tribunal member has determined that the Minister of Transport acted correctly in suspending the applicant's category 3 medical certificate.  APPEAL  DATE OF DECISION February 5, 2001  Dr. Samuel Birenbaum, William T. Tweed, Keith E. Green  DECISION The appeal is dismissed. The Minister of Transport's decision is upheld.  REASONS FOR THE DECISION The appeal is dismissed. The Tribunal member at review concluded that, based on the medical evidence presented, the appellant had a medical condition called atrial fibrillation. This results in an irregular heartbeat, causing the risk of blood clots being sent to other parts of the body, a condition which could result in death or incapacitation. The appeal panel accepts and agrees with the review member's finding that the appellant is unfit to exercise the privileges of a category 3 medical certificate.		patients suffering from atrial fibrillation are put onto
However, the applicant is not taking anticoagulant therapy which would certainly appear to put him at an even greater risk of developing complications. Based on the evidence, the Tribunal member has determined that the Minister of Transport acted correctly in suspending the applicant's category 3 medical certificate.  APPEAL  DATE OF DECISION  February 5, 2001  MEMBERS  Dr. Samuel Birenbaum, William T. Tweed, Keith E. Green  DECISION  The appeal is dismissed. The Minister of Transport's decision is upheld.  REASONS FOR THE DECISION  The appeal is dismissed. The Tribunal member at review concluded that, based on the medical evidence presented, the appellant had a medical condition called atrial fibrillation. This results in an irregular heartbeat, causing the risk of blood clots being sent to other parts of the body, a condition which could result in death or incapacitation. The appeal panel accepts and agrees with the review member's finding that the appellant is unfit to exercise the privileges of a category 3 medical certificate.		anticoagulant therapy (blood thinners) which helps to therapy which would certainly appear to put him at an even greater risk of developing complications. Based on the evidence, the Tribunal member has determined that the Minister of Transport acted correctly in suspending the applicant's category 3 medical certificate.  APPEAL  DATE OF DECISION  February 5, 2001  MEMBERS  Dr. Samuel Birenbaum, William T. Tweed, Keith E. Green  DECISION  The appeal is dismissed. The Minister of Transport's decision is upheld.  REASONS FOR THE DECISION  The appeal is dismissed. The Tribunal member at review concluded that, based on the medical evidence presented, the appellant had a medical condition called atrial fibrillation. This results in an irregular heartbeat, causing the risk of blood clots being sent to other parts of the body, a condition which could result in death or incapacitation. The appeal panel accepts and agrees with the review member's finding that the appellant is unfit to exercise the privileges of a category 3 medical certificate. even greater risk of developing complications. Based on the evidence, the Tribunal member has determined that the Minister of Transport acted correctly in suspending the applicant's category 3 medical certificate.  APPEAL  DATE OF DECISION  February 5, 2001  MEMBERS  Dr. Samuel Birenbaum, William T. Tweed, Keith E. Green  DECISION  The appeal is dismissed. The Minister of Transport's decision is upheld.  REASONS FOR THE DECISION  The appeal is dismissed. The Tribunal member at review concluded that, based on the medical evidence presented, the appellant had a medical condition called atrial fibrillation. This results in an irregular heartbeat, causing the risk of blood clots being sent to other parts of the body, a condition which could result in death or incapacitation. The appeal panel accepts and agrees with the review member's finding that the appellant is unfit to exercise the privileges of a category 3 medical certificate.		However, the applicant is not taking anticoagulant the evidence, the Tribunal member has determined that the Minister of Transport acted correctly in suspending the applicant's category 3 medical certificate.  APPEAL  DATE OF DECISION  February 5, 2001  MEMBERS  Dr. Samuel Birenbaum, William T. Tweed, Keith E. Green  DECISION  The appeal is dismissed. The Minister of Transport's decision is upheld.  REASONS FOR THE DECISION  The appeal is dismissed. The Tribunal member at review concluded that, based on the medical evidence presented, the appellant had a medical condition called atrial fibrillation. This results in an irregular heartbeat, causing the risk of blood clots being sent to other parts of the body, a condition which could result in death or incapacitation. The appeal panel accepts and agrees with the review member's finding that the appellant is unfit to exercise the privileges of a category 3 medical certificate.		therapy which would certainly appear to put him at an
the Minister of Transport acted correctly in suspending the applicant's category 3 medical certificate.  APPEAL  DATE OF DECISION February 5, 2001  MEMBERS DECISION The appeal is dismissed. The Minister of Transport's decision is upheld.  REASONS FOR THE DECISION The appeal is dismissed. The Tribunal member at review concluded that, based on the medical evidence presented, the appellant had a medical condition called atrial fibrillation. This results in an irregular heartbeat, causing the risk of blood clots being sent to other parts of the body, a condition which could result in death or incapacitation. The appeal panel accepts and agrees with the review member's finding that the appellant is unfit to exercise the privileges of a category 3 medical certificate.
the applicant's category 3 medical certificate.  APPEAL  DATE OF DECISION  February 5, 2001  Dr. Samuel Birenbaum, William T. Tweed, Keith E. Green  DECISION  The appeal is dismissed. The Minister of Transport's decision is upheld.  REASONS FOR THE DECISION  The appeal is dismissed. The Tribunal member at review concluded that, based on the medical evidence presented, the appellant had a medical condition called atrial fibrillation. This results in an irregular heartbeat, causing the risk of blood clots being sent to other parts of the body, a condition which could result in death or incapacitation. The appeal panel accepts and agrees with the review member's finding that the appellant is unfit to exercise the privileges of a category 3 medical certificate.
APPEAL  DATE OF DECISION  February 5, 2001  Dr. Samuel Birenbaum, William T. Tweed, Keith E. Green  DECISION  The appeal is dismissed. The Minister of Transport's decision is upheld.  REASONS FOR THE DECISION  The appeal is dismissed. The Tribunal member at review concluded that, based on the medical evidence presented, the appellant had a medical condition called atrial fibrillation. This results in an irregular heartbeat, causing the risk of blood clots being sent to other parts of the body, a condition which could result in death or incapacitation. The appeal panel accepts and agrees with the review member's finding that the appellant is unfit to exercise the privileges of a category 3 medical certificate.
DATE OF DECISION  MEMBERS  Dr. Samuel Birenbaum, William T. Tweed, Keith E. Green  DECISION  The appeal is dismissed. The Minister of Transport's decision is upheld.  REASONS FOR THE DECISION  The appeal is dismissed. The Tribunal member at review concluded that, based on the medical evidence presented, the appellant had a medical condition called atrial fibrillation. This results in an irregular heartbeat, causing the risk of blood clots being sent to other parts of the body, a condition which could result in death or incapacitation. The appeal panel accepts and agrees with the review member's finding that the appellant is unfit to exercise the privileges of a category 3 medical certificate.
MEMBERS  Dr. Samuel Birenbaum, William T. Tweed, Keith E. Green  The appeal is dismissed. The Minister of Transport's decision is upheld.  REASONS FOR THE DECISION  The appeal is dismissed. The Tribunal member at review concluded that, based on the medical evidence presented, the appellant had a medical condition called atrial fibrillation. This results in an irregular heartbeat, causing the risk of blood clots being sent to other parts of the body, a condition which could result in death or incapacitation. The appeal panel accepts and agrees with the review member's finding that the appellant is unfit to exercise the privileges of a category 3 medical certificate.
DECISION  The appeal is dismissed. The Minister of Transport's decision is upheld.  REASONS FOR THE DECISION  The appeal is dismissed. The Tribunal member at review concluded that, based on the medical evidence presented, the appellant had a medical condition called atrial fibrillation. This results in an irregular heartbeat, causing the risk of blood clots being sent to other parts of the body, a condition which could result in death or incapacitation. The appeal panel accepts and agrees with the review member's finding that the appellant is unfit to exercise the privileges of a category 3 medical certificate.
DECISION  The appeal is dismissed. The Minister of Transport's decision is upheld.  The appeal is dismissed. The Tribunal member at review concluded that, based on the medical evidence presented, the appellant had a medical condition called atrial fibrillation. This results in an irregular heartbeat, causing the risk of blood clots being sent to other parts of the body, a condition which could result in death or incapacitation. The appeal panel accepts and agrees with the review member's finding that the appellant is unfit to exercise the privileges of a category 3 medical certificate.	MEMBERS decision is upheld.  REASONS FOR THE DECISION  The appeal is dismissed. The Tribunal member at review concluded that, based on the medical evidence presented, the appellant had a medical condition called atrial fibrillation. This results in an irregular heartbeat, causing the risk of blood clots being sent to other parts of the body, a condition which could result in death or incapacitation. The appeal panel accepts and agrees with the review member's finding that the appellant is unfit to exercise the privileges of a category 3 medical certificate.
REASONS FOR THE DECISION  The appeal is dismissed. The Tribunal member at review concluded that, based on the medical evidence presented, the appellant had a medical condition called atrial fibrillation. This results in an irregular heartbeat, causing the risk of blood clots being sent to other parts of the body, a condition which could result in death or incapacitation. The appeal panel accepts and agrees with the review member's finding that the appellant is unfit to exercise the privileges of a category 3 medical certificate.	DECISION review concluded that, based on the medical evidence presented, the appellant had a medical condition called atrial fibrillation. This results in an irregular heartbeat, causing the risk of blood clots being sent to other parts of the body, a condition which could result in death or incapacitation. The appeal panel accepts and agrees with the review member's finding that the appellant is unfit to exercise the privileges of a category 3 medical certificate.
presented, the appellant had a medical condition called atrial fibrillation. This results in an irregular heartbeat, causing the risk of blood clots being sent to other parts of the body, a condition which could result in death or incapacitation. The appeal panel accepts and agrees with the review member's finding that the appellant is unfit to exercise the privileges of a category 3 medical certificate.	REASONS FOR THE DECISION atrial fibrillation. This results in an irregular heartbeat, causing the risk of blood clots being sent to other parts of the body, a condition which could result in death or incapacitation. The appeal panel accepts and agrees with the review member's finding that the appellant is unfit to exercise the privileges of a category 3 medical certificate. causing the risk of blood clots being sent to other parts of the body, a condition which could result in death or incapacitation. The appeal panel accepts and agrees with the review member's finding that the appellant is unfit to exercise the privileges of a category 3 medical certificate. of the body, a condition which could result in death or incapacitation. The appeal panel accepts and agrees with the review member's finding that the appellant is unfit to exercise the privileges of a category 3 medical certificate.		, incapacitation. The appeal panel accepts and agrees with the review member's finding that the appellant is unfit to exercise the privileges of a category 3 medical certificate. with the review member's finding that the appellant is unfit to exercise the privileges of a category 3 medical certificate. unfit to exercise the privileges of a category 3 medical certificate.
certificate.
LIIMRKA INNIVIRNI		